The right place at the right time

www.himss Eurasia.com

- Hospitals are the right place to get specialized treatment and specialized consistent monitoring – a place of safety and care
- But.....
- What was right for 1990 is not necessarily totally applicable in 2020

 @CharlesAlessi

What's changed in hospitals over the past 30 years ?

19902020

- Evidence based care
- Care revolves around the clinicians
- Care delivered by specialized health teams
- Application of real world data
- Care revolves around the patient
- Care delivered by health and care teams – value of non health determinants

 @CharlesAlessi

Other drivers of change

- Cost – financial pressure on health and care systems
- Convenience – for the person as well as the clinician
- Metrics – from activity to non-biomedical outcomes
- Prevention – from aspiration to realization

Enablers

- Technology can take the best of monitoring and translocate this into people's homes
- Built in governance means this could become mainstream
- Digital transformation can make health and care systems interoperable enough for the care to be delivered seamlessly

Potential Roadblocks

- Existing clinical working practices
- Existing metrics that drive clinical systems
- Variable interpretation of Data governance

Some insights from an international perspective...

- “C suite” active involvement essential
- Take the best and trial
- Spread and deployment at scale is the biggest challenge ...
- Managing governance and audit from the design stage is essential
- The people in receipt of the service are key players
